The Interagency Pig Management Council (IPMC) was established in December 2000 as a mechanism for coordinating efforts and facilitating communication among government agencies involved (directly or indirectly) in pig production and/or pig manure management in American Samoa. Each participating organization is engaged in one or more activities potentially affected by pig manure management practices such as drinking water supplies, surface/ground water quality, wastewater management, natural resources management, agricultural production, human health, and/or economic development. As such, each participating organization has a vested interest in effective management of pig manure in American Samoa. Through the IPMC, these organizations can share their ideas, strengthen their own programs, and coordinate their efforts, including public outreach activities. Participating agencies and organizations include:

- American Samoa Community College
- American Samoa Department of Agriculture
- American Samoa Department of Commerce
- American Samoa Department of Education
- American Samoa Department of Health
- American Samoa Environmental Protection Agency
- American Samoa Power Authority
- American Samoa Resource Conservation and Development Council
- USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service

IPMC officers include:

- Ms. Laura Laumatia (ASCC-AHNR-Ag Extension) – Chair
- Mr. Wally Jennings (USDA-NRCS) = Vice-Chair
- Mr. Bobby Midkiff (DOA) – Secretary
